Mrs. G. H. Mann of 332 South Lawrence, opened her doors of her cozy home drao recital of Mrs. S. T. Hentickson's piano pupils, last Manday evening. Miss Flora Jones opened the program with a Scherzeno of Mozkowski. The excellencies of her playing are the firmness of her touch and clearness of notes. She rendered it well. Mrs. G. H. Mann followed with Geibel's Idyl, "A Storm at Sea," The various accessitudes of a storm beaten vessel at sea were all of a storm beaten vessel at sea were all brought out strikingly under Mrs. Mann's manipulations of the keys. One of the most eujoyable numbers was Miss Stella Wilson's "Fantasie Caprice." The piece was well suited to her most conspicuous qualities, the rapidity and evenness of her runs and arpegglos, turns and trills. Later in the evening she played Mendelesohn's "Hunting Song" and the "Gipsy Rondo" in both of which she displayed her powers as a pianist. Clarence and Hazel Smith, two little folks drew a large share of the amplayer with a due! and Hazel Smith, two little folks drew a large share of the applause with a duet, entitled "Le Petit Carnival." Miss Belle Noble played Gottschalk "Last Hope." She conquered the technical difficulties of the piece courageously and received the approbation of her hearers. Mrs. G. H. Mann played Rubenstein's beautiful melody in F, and Clarence Smith gave a very acceptable rendition of the old-time favorite. "The Shepherd Boy." The next number was Schubert's serenade by Miss Flora Jones. Little Hazel Smith, who is but 8 years of age, gave the audience a sweet little rem in clear, well-defined notes. Belle Noble played Chapin's weird "Prelude Celebre," which has many odd difficulties for the fingers. The recital was a success and reflected great credit on Mrs. Hendrickson's efforts. The exercises Christmas night at Ply onth church were unique and exceed gly interesting. The church was filled efore the time for the beginning of the orogram and many who were unable to out the entire program. A stage had been erected in the south end of the chapel, and in one corner stood a Christmas tree, decorated with candy, pop-corn, etc. This was screened from view during the early part of the evening. The middle of the stage was transformed into a cosy sitting room for Santa Claus, whose portly figure soon appeared. Father Time and Little Dial came to visit Santa, and in order to answer the questions which Santa asked him. Father Time summoned the Hours, which had seen great events in the earthly life of Christ. There were twenty of these in costume, and as each recited his story the Sabbath school sang an appropriate the Sabbath school sang an appropriate hymn. Then, at the close, a report will given by each Sunday school class, stating what gift it had made this Christmas-tide. The tree was dismantled by Santa and his fruit distributed by the Hours. These were: Faith Warren, Harry Reeves, Flora Millison, Hattle Parker, Edith Ross, Joste Vennard, Winnie Parker, Grace Hatton, Ethel Chifford, Eugene Kramer, Ray Johnson, Beh. HOW TO BUILD SENTENCES.

A sentence is a series of words so arranged as to make complete sense Every sentence is either periodic or los

That is, either the sense is suspended until the end, or it is not. Punctuation does for the eve. in written discourse, what emphasis, in spoken discourse, does for the ears.

As between long and short sentences, it is best to use common sense, and in every instance to remember and consider the effect to be produced. A monotony either of long or of short sentences is, like all monotony, extremely annoying.

In obedience to the principle of unity each sentence should contain but one important assertion. The test of a well massed sentence is that the words which eatch the eye should be those upon which the writer desires particularly to lay stress. It is difficult deliberately to mass a see tence without producing the impress artificiality. But, if possible, the principal words should be placed at the beginning and the end. And, especially, end your sentences with words that deserve distinc-The principle of coherence is more difficult to discuss than are the two principles of unity and mass. Briefly expressed, it demands that words which are closely similar in thought should be kept together while those which are dissimilar in thought should be kept apart. A blunder in grammar is called a sole cism. But there are constructions that do not make sense, and still are sanctioned by good use. These are not solectsms, but idioms. "Was you there!" said of a singular subject, was once an idiom, but not is a solecism -- Professor Wendell.
